CHORUS PREPARES TO SING "MESSIAH"

More Members Needed for Oratorio to be Given Dec. 19-20.

With but six weeks rehearsal before presentation of "The Messiah," the community chorus organized at Library hall Wednesday night, made plans for the coming rehearsals and the presentation of the oratorio.

It was decided to accept the sponsorship of the Apollo club for the oratorio, which last year was given without any such backing. Rehearsals will be held every Wednesday night at Library hall and the first rehearsal was Wednesday night. The event will be given at Milton on Tuesday night, Dec. 19 and here, probably in the Congregational church.

Dr. J. H. Miller, of the educational department of the national Chamber of Commerce, will be the speaker.

Regular meeting of the College of Agriculture, held at a meeting in the Rock County court house, Wednesday night, Nov. 9, 1932.

The only difference over last year, is that this year we are to be backed by a strong organization, thus taking the responsibility off those who should devote their time to the oratorio.

Wanted to make it interesting to all in the community, and want everybody who can to join in. We are but following the national movement toward more community singing.

Community singing of the Apollo club, whose first concert is "The Messiah," are now on sale. It is planned to have but one performance here of this oratorio, but if demand will be enough, a second performance will be given at 4 p. m. for children and others who cannot attend in the evening.

THE PENDULUM SWINGS THE OTHER WAY.

Out of the dust raised by the election Tuesday one may attempt to explain and still be far from the real reason for each result. Local conditions dominated many of the conclusions in congressional and senatorial elections. For instance, Henry Cabot Lodge in Massachusetts was within an ace of being defeated largely for the reason that many republicans of this state were opposed to his attitude on the League of Nations. Out in Missouri James Reed was elected in spite of the fact he opposed the League of Nations. So it would hardly do to say that this issue was general or applicable to more than one case. Gilbert Hitchcock, defeated in Nebraska, was the personal representative of President Wilson on the floor of the senate in the League battle and was defeated. In Maryland Senator France who has been extremely radical, whose well known friendship for the soviet and whose efforts to have Russia recognized following a trip he made to Leningrad and Trotsky a year ago, failed, was defeated by a strong Wilson democrat. On the other hand we find Brookhart in Iowa and Shipstead in Minnesota, either of whom is more radical than France ever was, both supporting Russian recognition, and both elected. So it depends somewhat on locality as to radicalism and its quality for victory. No attempt to set down as an issue any one thing to which the result is due, will succeed since we meet opposing facts whenever it is attempted.

Therefore we must assume that it was a state of mind swayed here and there by local factors, as in the case of Townsend in Michigan, where his vote and voice was for Newberry; or in Indiana, where Beveridge was defeated by the solid labor vote and in Ohio where Pomeroy failed for the same reason although the state of the president elected a democratic governor. That state of mind is a general dissatisfaction with the federal administration. That state of mind was fed by continued attacks on the tariff, by the wiggling and wobbling on the soldier bonus, by the Daugherty injunctions and the skipping board scandals, by the split in the congressional vote on a hundred different questions where the party with its overwhelming majority was divided. It was emphasized too by the strikes or the rail troubles to meet either the coal strike or the rail troubles with any definite result policy. There has been no real republican leadership, no coherence of policy, and under the name of republicanism the worst form of radicalism has run wild in some sections as in Wisconsin, and to ultra conservatism as in New York state.

Perhaps no other administration could have done better. The legacy left by the Wilson administration was a legacy of fraud and extravagance, waste and incompetence, of debt and foreign entanglement, of broken down railroad systems and a merchant marine costing billions just to look at. Deflation had been commenced long before the patient and good natured man from Marion went into office. The farmer was beginning to reap the bitter fruit of that deflation. He has not yet recovered, nor will he for some time to come. He has been the easy prey of radical leaders who have few remedies but wordy criticism and denunciation. All the good that has been done, the hard work and hours of study and effort put forth to solve the economic problems of a nation, have gone for little and been forgotten in the general desire to hit some one on the head. It might all be summed up in a few words: lack of confidence. It makes no difference as to why there is such a lack but it is a living dominant fact. There is nothing positive about the victory of the democrats either in the senate or house. It is a negative result. It is inconceivable that the people would return to power the democratic party, whose policies are responsible for the beginning for the present condition, with any hope of bettering themselves. We will have a house and a senate after March 4th next, which will be so close in the party alignments as to make any constructive legislation impossible. There is a waste of two years ahead of us in playing for political position for the presidential election. The three groups will be equally culpable, republicans, democrats and radicals. It is not a happy situation to contemplate. Fortunately the nation may well work out its own economic salvation in that time without the aid of legislation. In that time without the aid of legislation, the nation may well work out its own economic salvation. And there is the saving grace that we shall be spared much of the experimental explorations into the field of freak laws.

It would seem that it is almost as safe to kill a preacher as it is for a wife to shoot her husband.

The Chicago Tribune said in its report of the Wisconsin election Wednesday morning that "A heavy vote for the democratic candidates (in Wisconsin) will be construed as a popular demand for a referendum on the liquor laws." By that yardstick the people of Wisconsin have registered heavily against such a referendum. The vote for Bentley, who was frankly wet, is negligible and that for Mrs. Hooper far greater and Mrs. Hooper is dry. The defeat of Woodworth was another example of what the voter wants and that is not a referendum. The Tribune staked too much on a platform that was so wet that it wouldn't hold any more water.

It's a good thing Henry Cabot Lodge did not cut off his board. He won by a whisker only.

WEATHER AND EFFICIENCY

BY FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington—When you lose your pen on a damp gloomy day, or when you find it hard to concentrate on a difficult problem right after lunch, don't get nervous and think that you are on the verge of a breakdown. You are merely a living example of the natural rhythms of efficiency.

Almost everyone has a preferred time for brain work and for exercise. You hear a man say, "I wait until late at night to do my reading because it is quiet and I can concentrate. My mind seems to work better then than at any other time." Another person holds an equally decided opinion that early in the morning is the best time for brain work. Opinions of this sort have been held for centuries.

But for the past few decades science has been making tests of the actual abilities of human beings in varying circumstances. The effects on efficiency of the weather, the time of day, and the season of the year have been tested by numerous investigators. The results have shown that these factors do have an influence on efficiency, and that certain rhythms prevail. If a large group of people is tested throughout one day all most all are found to reach the peak of mental ability at about the same hour, and if the tests are repeated over a long period of time the tendency of the efficiency curve to follow the same course each day is still more apparent.

The interesting fact shown by such tests is that comparatively few people are at their best when they think they are. College students asked by Professor Arthur Gates to tell at what hour they could study best showed a decided preference for 11 and 9 o'clock. Comparatively few chose 10 or 12 in the morning, at which time, according to scientific tests, the peak of mental efficiency is attained. And very few, Dr. Gates says, appreciated the efficiency of the afternoon hours, noticeably 3 o'clock.

His conclusion is that "one's subjective feelings with regard to the time of greatest efficiency are not reliable indications of real efficiency. The organism may be able to produce the greatest amount and the best quality of work at a time when feelings of fatigue and kindred factors lead us to believe that our efficiency is low."

According to Dr. Archibald Peake, who made a study of this subject, brain power rises to a high point at 11. It drops considerably around noon and then rises to a maximum around 2 p. m. after which there is a gradual decrease until the close of the day.

Physical ability rises to a similar high point around 11 and drops slightly from noon to 1 p. m., then rises again to a maximum sometime between 2 and 6 o'clock.

Dr. Peake says that "in speed and accuracy tests, accuracy is better in the morning and speed greater in the afternoon, a result which seems to show that speed is often gained at the expense of accuracy."

This refers to a degree the popular idea that when a person has been working a while fatigue pulls down his efficiency. Real fatigue does undoubtedly lessen efficiency, but it is explained by some scientists that many people give in too easily to weariness. They allow themselves to sink into a semi-conscious state in the afternoon slumps, simply because they are firmly convinced that their efficiency cannot be as great as in the morning. Subconsciously perhaps they say to themselves, "I always am tired in the afternoon. It is natural for a person to slow down then." And because they believe that conditions are pulling against them they give in.

People who have this complex may find themselves more alert if they reflect that around two and three o'clock, when the noon slump is about over, conditions are very nearly as favorable for efficiency as at the high point of the morning's work.

Those who allow themselves to drag through the middle of the afternoon and pull themselves together at night are not taking advantage of the best hours for alertness, or so the results of numerous tests would indicate. There may be, of course, other factors to consider in special cases. There is something in favor of night hours as conducive to mental effort. If distractions are removed and the brain is not charged with items of the daily routine to be gone through with, the mental relaxation may offset the dip in the efficiency curve.

Some of the effects of weather on energy and alertness as traced by investigators are decidedly unexpected to most laymen. Thus most of us would not imagine that more suicides occur on bright sunny days than on the kind of day we think of as depressing. Yet comparison of weather and suicide records in New York City for a period covering five years showed that persons who intend to take their lives screw up their determination on a bright sunny day, but the sun brings the energy necessary to action.

The sun stimulates constructive as well as destructive activity. Dexter, who made a special study of weather conditions, found from experiments that a high degree of accuracy might be expected on a day that is sunny or on the other combines cloudiness with dry atmospheric conditions. Damp days in banks are recognized as bad for complicated bookkeeping. Dexter says, and he adds:

"During London fogs, and on days when the weather is particularly depressing, in the Bank of England, certain sets of books, an error in which would be cumulative and produce disastrous results further on, are looked up, and the clerks set at tasks less intricate and important in character."

This represents unusual precaution. Most people have to do the day's work regardless of weather. Knowing that damp weather is bad for accuracy is valuable only in that it enables them to put forth a special effort to guard against carelessness.

The effects of weather on efficiency and conduct are complex to a considerable degree. There may be innumerable combinations of wind, rain, sun, and humidity days, and efficiency may vary according to the ingredients and their strength. Some generalities may be noted, however.

According to Dexter, winds, if not excessively strong, exert vitality to increase. He also deduced from his statistical studies that cloudy days if not damp are favorable for mental activity. Too much heat from the sun is, of course, a drag on energy rather than a stimulation.

The layman who cannot delve into the subject will still find that he can apply the general principle to his advantage. It is undoubtedly true that we are less apt to fear or worry about what we understand. If you feel scrappily inclined and you recall that it is probably the weather, and the overdone of hot cakes for breakfast, you can become philosophical about your emotional state. Ten to one the impulse to pick a quarrel dies out when you trace it back to the sun and your engine.

STILL, THE NIGHTS ARE A BIT COOL.

Fashion paper says: "For your evening dress, I advise you to simply buy a piece of broad silver ribbon, pass it twice around the waist and knot it at the side."

In spite of increases in other lines, the wages of sin remains about the same as formerly.

What are you going to give her for Christmas? Oh, tut, tut!

JUST FOLKS

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

VISITORS.

We've had a lot of visitors it seems for weeks and weeks. And Pa is getting' all run down. Ma says that when he speaks he isn't civil any more. He mopes around on the porch and always seems to wear a look of sadness on his face. And yesterday he said to Ma, when she began to fuss: "I wonder when they're going to quit an' leave the home to us."

"It's nice to have your people come, but some of them should go. Instead of them being sticking here, like bull dogs at a show."

"The more the merrier," they shout as other ones drop in.

"I'm getting so I cannot stand to see your cousins' grin."

And, what is more, I'm getting tired of driving And mighty tired of visitors who must be taken out.

"Night after night when I've come home I've hauled them near and far, You'd think I was the driver of a town sight-seer car."

I've hauled them up to factories and monuments and parks, And buses and automobiles; I've shown 'em seals and sharks, And buses and automobiles; and now I want to quit.

I know they'd do the same for me, but I am sick of it.

"I wouldn't say a word at all about your folks. I know they're just as nice as they can be, but still I wish they'd go."

I'm tired of all the buzz and talk, the faces of those who've ducked our chairs forever occupied."

"And I am tired myself," said Ma, "as tired as I can be."

You're only on the job at night, but it's all day long for me."

Who's Who Today

ARCHBISHOP MUNDELEIN.

"We pay much attention to temporal things," says Archbishop George W. Mundelein of Chicago. "Instead of bringing up children with ideas of honesty and morality, parents hold money and worldly success as the supreme goal in life, and give for their only standard the thin veneer of civilization and the fear of being found out. Even in the time of our grandfathers, honor in business was counted higher than financial gain; but we have fallen from that standard and until the young men of this generation have been weaned from money instilled into them as ideals above all, there is in all the world a desire for ease that does not make for heroism. We are restless; seeking what we do not want, and getting farther away from religion."

Archbishop Mundelein has been mentioned several times recently as a possible choice of Pope Pius XI as one of the two new American cardinals the pope is said to be about to name. The archbishop was born July 2, 1872, in New York city. He obtained his B. A. degree at Manhattan college in 1899 and later obtained degrees in theological studies at St. Vincent's seminary and Urban college at Rome. He has been archbishop of the Chicago diocese since February 9, 1916.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Nov. 9, 1882.—More than $1,000 was made by the Sisters of Mercy at St. Joseph's convent at Rock County when they gave in Apollo ball for a week. Independents and democrats met in Lappin's hall last night to celebrate their victory in the recent election. A cane was presented Mr. Winans, winner in the race for congress. George E. Wendling lectures here tomorrow night.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Nov. 9, 1892.—J. L. Bear and other republican nominees won the election in the city and county yesterday. Mr. Bear, running for sheriff, and had many opposition. Congressmen—Gilmore's band played in the armory this afternoon to a small crowd, in spite of the excellence of the attraction.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Nov. 9, 1902.—John Hogan, Carlo, Harlow, Milburn, Chas. Yaker, Palmer, Flaherty, Galbraith and Casey are in the line-up of the local high school football team to play Wayland Academy this afternoon. A stiff game is expected. First meeting of the year of the Rock County Medical Society was held last night.

TEN YEARS AGO

Nov. 9, 1912.—Attendance at the library Sunday afternoons has been good enough, Miss Cobb reported to the board yesterday, to continue the plan. It was decided to have a booth at the coming industrial exhibit at the rink, part of the "made in Janesville" week festivities.—The Rock County sugar company has imported 30 laborers because of the scarcity of them in this section.

THE SECOND GRAND BOIL

In offering a few hints the other day on "How Not to Handle Boils" I formulated two important rules for those who do not yearn to handle a line of boils. The first rule was: Never touch anything that has touched a boil. These are very simple rules for clearly intelligent persons who can and do discipline themselves and control their inquisitive fingers.

To the two rules of management of boils already laid down, I would add another: Never poultice a boil or any lesion that resembles a boil.

This third rule will seem deliberately aimed at ridicule. Be it so. My reputation for discrediting age is already made and I have nothing more to lose. He who poultices a boil nurses and nourishes trouble. There can be nothing more agreeable to the ordinary pus-producing germs (Staphylococcus pyogenes aureus et alii) than a nice moist warm flannel meal poultice. The doctors of the old before the discovery of the cause of blood poisoning favored poulticing because poultices produced "laudable pus"—they imagined then, as unlightened folk do now, that it was good for such things. I do not, however, and run, to carry corruption and humor out of the system, you know.

Now, children, this corruption and humor business is a sad mistake. No more corruption or humor comes out of the most pus-producing boil, than comes out of your finger when you cut it. Pus examined chemically and microscopically proves to be nothing but the dead and dying phagocytes or soldier cells of the blood, together with countless hordes of living and dead pus germs. So you see, if you are not a superstitious and totally amphybious person, that of a boil by a poultice, even if a poultice would draw anything out.

Use the poultice as Charlie Chaplin would use custard pie; be careful and don't get one on your boil.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Acetophenetidine.

Please tell me what acetophenetidine is and also what the effect is on the system when used (for headache) over a prolonged period, in five grain doses? (C. W. P.)

Answer—This is the chemical name for one of the coal-tar pain killers commonly known as phenacetin. The effect is the same as that of acetaminophen, aspirin, and others of that group, namely, impairment of the heart, breaking down the blood corpuscles, and in some cases mental and physical deterioration. Now and then a sudden death is due to poisoning by one of these much abused drugs.

Five Per Centum Sulphur Ointment.

Reference was made in your column to a 5 per centum sulphur ointment for the cure of eczema. I would appreciate it if you will print the formula and directions again. (W. L. S.)

Answer—Well, here is a 10 per centum formula that will do as well or better:

Sulleylic acid.....20 grains
Castor oil.....1 ounce
Ointment of Rose Water.....1 ounce

Apply to scalp with tips of fingers, sparingly, by putting the fingers, rubbing the ointment in here and there, each night of the week except Saturday or Sunday and on the night of the hair, applying for two weeks. Then apply it about once a week for three months. This ointment, properly made, contains no particles that can be felt with the fingers.

Charge Sustained.

Beverly, I was accidentally shot and a buckshot still remains in my body, but have caused no trouble. Should it be removed? (S. J.)

Answer—No.

Q. How can nuts be cracked so that the meats will come out whole? (C. H. T.)

A. Putting the nuts in boiling water for three to five minutes makes it possible to crack them when cool and remove the meats whole.

Q. Who originated the expression "Say It With Kiewit"? (W. A. T.)

A. The late N. A. P. Lindberg of Rugby, N. D., was credited with the coining of the phrase.

Q. Is atlatl a combination of several species? (D. H.)

A. Atlatl is a single species which has a flange resembling a mixture of clamshell, nutmeg and cloves. It is obtained by crushing the dry arillic berry of the pimento, a small evergreen tree cultivated in the West Indies.

Q. What is a dealer in foreign money called? (J. E. U.)

A. A dealer in manual or money of foreign countries or bills of exchange is a cambist. A numismatist is one who studies the science of coins and makes collections of them.

Q. What is the food value of pickles? (C. J. S.)

A. Cucumber pickles are about 55 per cent water, and contain about 70 calories per pound.

Q. Is there any connection between forest fires and the extermination of fish? (D. H.)

A. The practical extinction of trout followed a great forest fire in the White Mountains. It is thought that the leaching out of ash left by the fire increased the alkalinity of the water in the mountain streams until fish could not live in it.

Q. What is the log of a ship? (P. A.)

A. An instrument towed by the vessel by which the distance traveled is ascertained is called the log. The record of the ship's speed is therefore extended to a full nautical report of the voyage.

Q. What are the primary colors? (W. O.)

A. The primary colors are those into which the spectrum of light is separated according to the scheme invented by Sir Isaac Newton. They are red, yellow, orange, green, blue, indigo, and violet.

Q. Who or what was the "ape-man of Java"? (R. A. H.)

A. In 1891-92 Dr. Eugene Dubois of Holland, while conducting geological explorations in Java, discovered a fossilized skull cap or calvaria, two molar teeth and a thigh bone, all clearly of primate character and presumably from a single individual. In 1894 Dr. Dubois published a paper in which he assumed the name Pithecanthropus erectus, or "erect-standing ape-man," and which he hailed as a long sought missing link between apes and man. Great importance was attached to this discovery, but authorities have never fully agreed that Dr. Dubois found the missing link.

THURSDAY

REPUBLICANS GET DISCONTENT JOLT

Popular Peeve Falls Hard on Party Now in Power.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1922, by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington—The American people are still voting in the negative. They have not changed their mood from 1920, but this time it was the republican party which had to bear the brunt of popular discontent.

Analysis of the returns show clearly that whether a republican or a democrat was defeated, the reason was the same. The voters are not in the protesting attitude of the electorate rather than in an affirmative search for a constructive alternative. No raiding principle can be applied except one, namely that when the public is dissatisfied it turns from one party to the other, irrespective of whether it is a better program or a definite policy.

The turnover this year is practically as great as it was in 1920. In the middle of the Taft administration, the republican party was lucky enough to obtain such a big majority in 1920 in both the senate and house they would have lost control of both this time. As it is, the democratic party has the comfortable control of both houses.

Speaking of 1924, the returns certainly have heartened the democrats at a time when their morale in states lowest. The popular vote in states to democracy even after so short a period as two years, for it is just 24 months ago that they helped bury the democrats under the greatest avalanche in American history.

New Democratic Leaders
It looks today as if the democratic party would provide itself with new leaders both inside and outside of congress. Senator Oscar Underwood, who announced that his health will not permit him to accept the leadership of his party in the senate, Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, who was named up in the fight for democratic leader in the senate, has been defeated for reelection. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, an aggressive type of political leader, is likely to be chosen.

Detent of France
Maryland retired Senator France and elected W. Cabell Bruce, as was anticipated. New Jersey's senatorial race proved as spirited as everybody thought it would be, but the edge went to Edwards in the last few days. In the tremendous vote for Edwards in Hudson county was larger than anybody believed possible. The Hague machine voted its people by the thousands, men and women, and the vote issue helped Edwards in that the vote issue helped Jersey City and Hoboken.

Indiana may seem a puzzle because of the many reports that Develde would win easily. When the writer was in Indiana he noted symptoms of revolt and emphasized the hostility which labor was showing toward Beveridge because of his speeches advocating a reduction in wages. Labor took an active part in the campaign in Indiana and Ohio. The defeat of Beveridge can be laid at the door of organized labor, and as for Senator Pomeroy, he, too, was injured by the organized votes of the labor element. It wasn't so much that the labor element but Pomeroy openly denounced arbitrary action by labor unions as against the public interest. The triumph of Vice Donahoe, democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, by a big majority proves that Senator Pomeroy, his running mate, was deliberately scratched by thousands of democratic laboring men.

Selected Bryan's Brother
Somewhat the same kind of cutting was done in Nebraska by the democratic "drys" who elected Charles W. Bryan, brother of William Jennings Bryan, to the governorship on the democratic ticket, but didn't pull Mr. Bryan through. This has been a close fight throughout the campaign, and it would appear that despite the senator's efforts to rid himself of the endorsement of the dregs of yesterday remembered his prohibition views and voted against him. The coalition of republican and democratic conservatives explains the lead of J. P. T. O'Connor, democratic candidate for United States senator in North Dakota, and there is every reason to believe that the results west of the Mississippi turned on local issues without a national fundamental back of them. Senator Reed's reelection in Missouri is much more of a source of joy to republicans who left their party to help him than to democrats. It is safe to say that many democrats outside of Missouri hoped he would be beaten because of his opposition to the Wilson policy on foreign affairs and his frequent voting with the republican senators.

Drive from Disappointment
The general drift toward the opposite party in the populous eastern states can be of course be attributed to the dissatisfaction with the party in power, but a combination of local circumstances is to be found in nearly every case which, it can be contended, necessary thousands of votes in the house. It will be conceded that the democratic landslide for governor in New York state pulled through the democratic candidates for house of representatives. But whatever it was, whatever the explanation, the republicans have spent an uncomfortable and nervous 24 hours, and they will continue to be on the anti and undisputed progress in the land of tree-dome.
